Mrs. Brown's Tea.

Mrs. Alexander. G. Brown, Jr., entertained at tea in her home on West Grace Street Thursday evening "The Young Married Woman's Club." The rooms were astefully decorated with pains and wild honeysuckle and the color scheme of the dining-room blended harmoniously to make the effect very pleasing. Those present were members of the club, all of whom have entered upon this happy estate within the last few years. The guests of the evening were Mrs. James E. Cannon, Mrs. Frank A. Holson, Mrs. D. B. Stringfellow, Mrs. R. Bruce Bowe, Mrs. Clay Drewry, Mrs. Langhorne Putney, Mrs. Thomas S. Armistead, Mrs. Hardin T. Burnley, Mrs. Edmund Benson, Mrs. Stuart Bowe, Mrs. Charles W. Spicer, Mrs. C. M. Knox, Mrs. Epgert Leigh, Jr., Mrs. Edward Quarles, Mrs. Edgar Lafferty, Mrs. Walter Miles and Mrs. Henry C. Riely.

Everything in nature is calling for outdoor living and merry-making. The tally-ho with its rollicking horn and its prancing steeds takes young men and maldens far a-field to return through the gloaming with their arms filled with the sweet spoil of wild flowers and grasses.

Coaching parties have many pleasant
objective points within easy distance,
One of the favorite of these in provious seasons has been Glen Allen.

Parties going can have the full charm
of the country a-blossom in May for seven or eight miles. A delicious supper at Forest Lodge makes the return drive seem the pleasantest part of the whole affair.

Another pleasant place is Lakeside grounds, its tennis courts and all the things that make for social amusement and enjoyment. Indeed, few cities of its size have more picturesque drives than Richmond and, with the past few years,
the establishment and development of suburban clubs and resorts has fully answered the needs and wishes of Richmond people.

The pleasure of out-of-door life in May-time was charmingly exemplified last afternoon at Lakeside where Mrs. Scott Parish assisted by a number of Richmond society wimen received the club guests who, in their pretty spring tolicis, and their sweet graciousness of manner, revived the spirit of cordiality and grace which have always made the informal club gatherings so distinctively pleasant.

in Richmond as the guest of Mrs. Jiall Moore, will appear at the Woman's Club to-morrow afternoon, when she will talk on "Plantation Reminiscences."

Mrs. Duncan's manner is most attractive, and she has a way of directly addressing her hearers that makes a vivid and lasting impression. Her subjects suggests everything that is suggestive and original in the way of characterization and description.

Mr. Elliott Daingerfield's appearance at the club last week gave a great and distinct pleasure to all who heard and met him. His talk on "Our Own Art and Its Beginnings," and in outlining the development of American art he made it distinctly traceable to Venetian influence, the Venetians being the first to introduce easy, graceful examples of picture painting.

From the Dutch masters as landscaplists Mr. Daingerfield said that John Constable and Richard Parks Bonnington became the fathers of natural art in England. Their paintings, hung in French salons, wrought a revolution in French art, which up to this time had been both still and formal.

Reverting to "our own art," Mr. Daingerfield spoke cloquently of the great strides made in the last twenty-five years by American artists. The uplifting of art standards and the diffusion of art education is shown everywhere in American by the character of the pictures hung in public and private galleries; by the interior and exterior decorations of public and private galleries; by the interior and exterior decorations of public and private suidings; by the art exhibits which are held in all American cities of importance, and by the art schools of this country, which are taking rank with those of Europe.

In the classification of American masters of art, Mr. Daingerfield gave to George Innes the honor of its fatherhood. He mentioned A. H. Wynant and Homer Martin as the foremost American artists, pure and simple, and those, who, like Sergeant and Abby, are more European than American by association and environment.

Mr. Daingerfield remained over in Richmond as the guest of honor full of encouragement and commendation.

Artistic Musicale.

Artistic Musicale.

One of the most enjoyable and artistic musicales ever presented in Richmond took place Friday evening in the Assembly Hall of Murphy's Hotel Annex. It was participated in hy some of the very best professional talent of the city.

The following artists, whose reputation in Richmond is too well known to need comment, took part in the entertainment; Mrs. John Murphy, Mrs. Jennie Yeamans, Misses Powell, Cofer and Morton, Messrs, Tribbett, Dunbar, Keenan, Hunter, Cunningham and Prof. Cosby.

The Assembly Hall was packed to its utmost capacity by a highly cultured and appreciative audience. Owing to the crowded condition of the hall, more than a hundred friends of the singers had to be turned away, being unable to gain admittance. The splendid audience present spurred the performers on to their best efforts. Every number was enthusastically encored. The artists all showed splendid taste in the selection of ther somes and recitations. Each participant deserves special mention for the part rendered towards a delightful evening of music and entertainment.

After the singing of "Good Night" by the First Baptist Church Quartette, the audience repaired to an adjoining hall, where refreshments were served.

The entertainment was under the management of Miss Louise O'Connor, who was ably seconded in her successful efforts by Mr. Louis Pizzini. The proceeds will go to the improvement of St. Peter's Cathedral.

A Great Triumph.

A Great Triumph.

The New York Times says:
The unveiling at Baltimore of the bronze
"The Spirit of the Confederacy" was a great triumph for the sculptor, Mr. F.
Wellington Ruckstuhl. Ho was not only applauded, but mentioned in the local papers, contrary to the practice in many cities where the chairman of the monument committee is the great man of the occasion. The group, consisting of a winged genius of herole size catching up a wounded Confederate and holding in her left hand a laurel wreath, stands on Mount Royal plaza. On the front of the pedestal is written: "Gloria Victis—To the Soldiers and Sallors of Maryland in the service of the Confederate States of America, 1861-1865." On the nort side:
"Glory Stands Beside Our Grief—Erected by Maryland Daughters of the Confederacy, February, 1963." The west side has the Italian motic of Maryland: "Fatti maschu, parole femine." Deeds are of men;
words are of women, and on the east side: "Deo Vindice." In God, the Avenger, or the Confederacy," draped with Confederate fings, was placed by Mr. J. Ross Jones above the entrance to the hall of the Masonic Temple, where the recent Confederate Bazaar was held.

The artist's conception is beautiful, and wherever it has been seen has fired the southern heart and awakened southern patriotism. There is just one thing, which, in view of the results of the just finished bazaar, is considered to be hardly in keeping with the other details of so exquisite a monument, and that is the Maryland motto inscribed upon it: "Deeds are of men; word are of women."

The southern woman, looking at the finished achievement of the Davis Memorial, which they have brought about through unparalleied energy and devotion of purpose, feel that they have the right to be taken into account through their deeds as, well as by the inspiration of their words. It is believed that never in the history of orgenized efforts among Confederate workers has there been one which has moved so unlitedly and harmoniously to an appointed end as the bazaar of April, 1903. The ladies who led it and served in it are best pleased of all to look back and remember that union and good fellowship characterized everything done from beginning to ending. It was justly characterized in its incipioney as necessarily "a hard pull, a long pull and a pull all together." When the necessity for pulling together ceased, because success had come, workers, when they knew their good fortune had the right to cay in parting, with "Tiny Tim":

the Best Seen.

The Newspaper Artists' Exhibition which is to be held in June will be a blg success both socially and artistically if enthusiasm on the part of the people of Richmond who are co-operating with the artists and the interest in the work which the boys themselves are showing, can be taken as a criterion. On every side are evidences of good will and substantial backing for the exhibition to make it, as "Mr. Martin Dooley" would say, "wan av' the best iver."

The first newspaper illustration appeared many years ago in the New York Herald, being reproduced from a wood cut, and crude enough it was. Later on appeared the Daily Graphic, an illustrated newspaper, which after a comparatively short career was discontinued on account of the great cost, and many other difficulties which were encountered. The work which will be shown at this exhibition will consist entirely of originals, and will embrace black and white, pastels, crayon, "wash," water colors and oils, Among the many well-known people of
